

The Cultural Integration Fellowship and the American Academy of Asian Studies, the predecessor of the California Institute of Integral Studies (CIIS), were created in 1951 as part of a rare convergence of writers, philosophers, psychologists, yoga practitioners, and artists. The period has been aptly identified as the San Francisco Renaissance. Both the Fellowship and the Academy reflected the values and spirit of the Renaissance by advancing East/West, spiritual, peace, environmental, and multicultural studies to inspire social and personal transformation – locally, nationally, and internationally.

The Fellowship and CIIS, the successor of the Academy, were founded by Haridas Chaudhuri who brought the concept of integral yoga to the US. He arrived at the Academy the same year as Alan Watts who introduced the US to Zen Buddhism. With Huston Smith and D.T. Suzuki on the East Coast and Chaudhuri and Watts on the West Coast, the spiritual vision of the US was expanded and inspired by their insightful writings and lectures. Through their work, the notions of integral consciousness, Yoga, East-West psychology, meditation, and holistic healing became part of the everyday vocabulary of contemporary English.

This presentation will focus on Dr. Chaudhuri's concept of integral yoga and his development of an integral model of education.

About the Speaker

Joseph L. Subbiondo, President of the California Institute of Integral Studies (CIIS) since June 1999, has served as Dean of the School of Liberal Arts at St. Mary's College of California; Vice President for Academic Affairs at the University of the Pacific; and Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Santa Clara University. Prior to his administrative appointments, Mr. Subbiondo was a faculty member in the English Departments at Santa Clara University and Villanova University. Presently, his principal scholarly interests are the history of linguistics and consciousness studies, spirituality and interfaith dialog, and integral models of education.
